Essentials Of New Life:

Essentials of New Life Francis M. Cosgrove,1988 The Essentials of Mysticism Evelyn Underhill,2017-03-02 Offering different essays of the practice of mysticism Underhill gives a thorough treatment of the practice that relies on experience rather than logic to justify the matters of faith While a dangerous path to follow as it can quickly lead to paths away from God this thinking is valid to a point in that we must be able to experience the fullness of God in some way to be fully alive in the realization of who God the Father is

Essentials of Social Psychology Emory Stephen Bogardus,1923 Mysticism, Practical Mysticism and The Essentials of Mysticism: A Study in Nature and Development of Spiritual Consciousness, The Life of the Spirit and the Life of To-Day, Ruysbroeck and Songs of Kabir Evelyn Underhill,Kabir,1930-01-01 Most highly developed branches of the human family have in common one peculiar characteristic They tend to produce sporadically it is true and often in the teeth of adverse external circumstances a curious and definite type of personality a type which refuses to be satisfied with that which other men call experience and is inclined in the words of its enemies to deny the world in order that it may find reality We meet these persons in the east and the west in the ancient mediaeval and modern worlds Their one passion appears to be the prosecution of a certain spiritual and intangible quest the finding of a way out or a way back to some desirable state in which alone they can satisfy their craving for absolute truth This quest for them has constituted the whole meaning of life They have made for it without effort sacrifices which have appeared enormous to other men and it is an indirect testimony to its objective actuality that whatever the place or period in which they have arisen their aims doctrines and methods have been substantially the same Their experience therefore forms a body of evidence curiously self consistent and often mutually explanatory which must be taken into account before we can add up the sum of the energies and potentialities of the human spirit or reasonably speculate on its relations to the unknown world which lies outside the boundaries of sense All men at one time or another have fallen in love with the veiled Isis whom they call Truth With most this has been a passing passion they have early seen its hopelessness and turned to more practical things But others remain all their lives the devout lovers of reality though the manner of their love the vision which they make to themselves of the beloved object varies enormously Some see Truth as Dante saw Beatrice an adorable yet intangible figure found in this world yet revealing the next To others she seems rather an evil but an irresistible enchantress enticing demanding payment and betraying her lover at the last Some have seen her in a test tube and some in a poet s dream some before the altar others in the slime The extreme pragmatists have even sought her in the kitchen declaring that she may best be recognized by her utility Last stage of all the philosophic sceptic has comforted an unsuccessful courtship by assuring himself that his mistress is not really there Under whatsoever symbols they have objectified their quest none of these seekers have ever been able to assure the world that they have found seen face to face the Reality behind the veil But if we may trust the reports of the mystics and they are reports given with a strange accent of certainty and good faith they have succeeded where all these others have failed in establishing immediate communication between the spirit of man entangled as they declare amongst material things and that only Reality that immaterial and final Being which some philosophers call the Absolute and most theologians call God This they say and here many who are not mystics agree with them is the hidden Truth which is the object of man s craving the only satisfying goal of his quest Hence they should claim from us the same attention that we give to other explorers of countries in which we are not competent to adventure ourselves for the mystics are the pioneers of the spiritual world and we have no right to deny validity to their discoveries merely because we lack the opportunity or the courage necessary to those who would prosecute such explorations for themselves It is the object of this book to attempt a description and also though this is needless for those who read that description in good faith a justification of these experiences and the conclusions which have been drawn from them So remote however are these matters from our ordinary habits of thought that their investigation entails in those who would attempt to understand them a definite preparation a purging of the intellect As with those who came of old to the Mysteries purification is here the gate of knowledge We must come to this encounter with minds cleared of prejudice and convention must deliberately break with our inveterate habit of taking the visible world for granted our lazy assumption that somehow science is real and metaphysics is not We must pull down our own card houses descend as the mystics say into our nothingness and examine for ourselves the foundations of all possible human experience before we are in a position to criticize the buildings of the visionaries the poets and the saints We must not begin to talk of the unreal world of these dreamers until we have discovered if we can a real world with which it may be compared Such a criticism of reality is of course the business of philosophy I need hardly say that this book is not written by a philosopher nor is it addressed to students of that imperial science Nevertheless amateurs though we be we cannot reach our starting point without trespassing to some extent on philosophic ground That ground covers the whole area of first principles and it is to first principles that we must go if we would understand the true significance of the mystic type
