

Faith Narrative Essay

"Many people do attain a mature faith once tested by temptation and yet affirmed as one's own"

Faith and spirituality are like pulling a single thread that can cause more threads to unravel. Pulling at the concept of faith presents a torrent of further questions and considerations. In my life, there have been factors — people and experiences — that have fundamentally shaped my faith and spirituality.

As a young child — innocent and curious — I have always wondered who God is. I grew up in a family with different faith traditions. My mother is a Roman Catholic, while my father is an unbaptized Jehovah's Witness. Consequently, I was betwixt between the two religions with their traditions and practices, and I was perplexed about who to follow. Nonetheless, I received the sacrament of the Eucharist and started to practice the Catholic faith tradition. My mother always reminded me how important it is to pray to God and obey Him as much as I can. It was always this narrative that surfaces every time I am reprimanded. My parents kickstarted my journey with my religion as a young child.

Consequently, as I got older, I inclined toward the sciences, and I started to have social interactions. First, I was convinced that things have explanations to be discovered. This might be what the first paradoxical faith is referring that I live in a secular age where "to be sure" means being able to prove it by experiment and "scientific" means. (CFC, page 47). Although in these years I was still affiliated with my church, a gap started; and eventually separated me from these faith traditions, while still practicing on my own the faith that I believe in through my spirituality.

Secondly, my friends played such a huge role in influencing my faith and spirituality. None from my circle can identify themselves as religious, although, they go to mass every Sunday. I can still remember how one of my friends said that, when religion fails to enlighten you of the questions of your faith and failed to recognize their function in helping you live out your spirituality, your religion loses its essence. I was left in shock by her statement but thinking rationally, this might be what Roger Haight was referring to in his work of defining spirituality. He explained that "religion has its purpose to reflect and support spirituality." I acknowledged the fact that, initially, we had a wrong notion of the essence of religion to the point of bastardizing its importance. We thought that religion is just the overt practice that our faith community is imposing. I just do not like people
