

General equilibrium

- Partial equilibrium analysis focuses on a single market
- It is based on the ceteris paribus (i.e. all else equal) assumption
- But changes in one market may also affect several other markets
 - A change in the price of a product affects the demand for complements and substitutes
 - A change in the price of a factor of production affects the income of the owners of that factor, and hence their demand for goods
- Hence the need for general equilibrium analysis
