Falconry Today:

The World of Falconry Hermann Schlegel, A. H. Verster de Wulverhorst, 1979      Falcons Over Texas John Thomas Flynn, 2018 Falconry has existed on our planet for thousands of years and permeated nearly every culture and continent. Wherever there have been birds of prey, falconers emerged alongside them. The use of tools played a key development in human evolution, but what is often overlooked is the use of other animals as tools. Humans learned to use mammals to hunt and work the land, but birds of prey are a step removed from us. The use of falcons was originally to obtain food, but in time it became a cultural tradition, a mark of nobility, or even a simple hobby. Falconry today stands to illustrate cultural and environmental significance. In 2016, UNESCO inscribed falconry as a living human heritage element of more than a dozen countries. Falconry holds for most a connection to the past. Though some technologies have changed, the practice has largely remained unchanged for centuries. In the US, where hunting is regulated by the government, acquiring a falconry permit is a lengthy and traditional ordeal, one that requires an apprentice to capture their own bird from the wild and train under a mentor for two years. Falconry also plays a role in hunting as conservation, a theme that is often overlooked or misunderstood. For hunters, it embodies the concept of ethical hunting and the role it can play in protecting the balance of species. Falconry takes many shapes today, but its practice tells a story of humans that is often forgotten and is a reminder of the indifference of nature. A bird of prey feeding on its prey summons primordial feelings that remind us of our hunter-gatherer roots, where existence and survival were a constant struggle. This report focuses on the visual beauty of falconry through a series of photographs of process and portrait with a narrative text to illustrate the key components of the sport.

How Fast Can a Falcon Dive? Peter Capainolo, Carol A. Butler, 2010. Want to know everything about birds of prey, our amazing raptors? Then Capainolo and Butler's compact book How Fast Can a Falcon Dive is the place to start. Joel Cracraft, Lamont Curator of Birds, American Museum of Natural History.

The Birds World Nicolae Sfetcu, 2014-11-27. Birds are among the most extensively studied of all animal groups. Hundreds of academic journals and thousands of scientists are devoted to bird research, while amateur enthusiasts called birdwatchers or more commonly birders probably number in the millions. Birds are categorised as a biological class, Aves. The earliest known species of this class is Archaeopteryx lithographica from the Late Jurassic period According to the most recent consensus Aves and a sister group the order Crocodilia together form a group of unnamed rank the Archosauria Phylogenetically Aves is usually defined as all descendants of the most recent common ancestor of modern birds or of a specific modern bird species like Passer domesticus and Archaeopteryx Modern phylogenies place birds in the dinosaur clade Theropoda Modern birds are divided into two superorders the Paleognathae mostly flightless birds like ostriches and the wildly diverse Neognathae containing all other birds

Under Construction: Logics of Urbanism in the Gulf Region

Ms Leila Vignal, 2014-10-28 Interdisciplinary in approach this volume explores and deciphers the symbolic value and iconicity of the built environment in the Arab Gulf Region its aesthetics language and performative characteristics Bringing together a range of studies by artists curators and scholars it demonstrates how Dubai appeared at least until the financial crisis to be leading the construction race and has already completed a large number of its landmark architecture and strategic facilities In contrast cities like the Qatari capital Doha still appear to be heavily under construction and in countries like the Sultanate of Oman ultra luxury tourism projects were started only recently While the construction of artificial islands theme parks and prestige sport facilities has attracted considerable attention much less is known about the region s widespread implementation of innovative infrastructure such as global container ports free zones inter island causeways and metro lines This volume argues that these endeavours are not simply part of a strategy to prepare for the post oil era for future economic survival and prosperity in the Lower Gulf region but that they are also aiming to strengthen identitarian patterns and specific national brands In doing so they exhibit similar yet remarkably diverse modes of engaging with certain global trends and present questionably distinct ideas for putting themselves on the global map Each country aims to grab attention with regard to the world wide flow of goods and capital and thus provide its own citizens with a socially acceptable trajectory for the future By doing that the countries in the Gulf are articulating a new semiotic and paradigm of urban development For the first time this volume maps these trends in their relation to architecture and infrastructure in particular by treating them as semiotics in their own right It suggests that recent developments in this region of the world not only represent a showcase of extraordinary initiatives by which these desert states have transformed but also that the commodification of local traditions acts as an essential element in the countries effort to design an Arab version of hyper modernity and to position themselves as a regional and global archetype which has frequently been adopted elsewhere
