Abstract

This article presents an action-research experience as an emblematic expression of new ways of generating value and organizational processes. The subject is related to the management of pre-schools, in which civil society takes responsibility for micro-processes that guarantee the generation of collective value for the community and the maintenance of a connective tissue through which narratives, stories, and experiences take root. Stories become relationships, networks of trust and collaboration with widespread availability that translates civic consciousness into actions, initiatives, and projects.

The article's contribution illustrates the challenges faced and the organizational processes activated with the different stakeholders involved in the system of activities considered, through a situated and conversational research-action approach (Shotter 2007), according to a dialogic research-action perspective (Shotter 2010). The results highlight the elements of social capital generated, as well as the critical issues that emerged in the work within the socio-organizational and community contexts.

Generating Social Capital M. Hooghe, D. Stolle, 2003-05-15 Social capital networks of civic engagements norms of reciprocity and attitudes of trust is widely seen as playing a key role for the health of democracy While many authors have examined the consequences of social capital there is a pressing need to explore its sources This collection brings together leading American and European scholars in the first comparative analysis of how social trust and other civic attitudes are generated The contributors to this volume examine the generation of social capital from two directions society based approaches that emphasize voluntary associations and institutional approaches that emphasize policy

EBOOK: First Generation Entry into Higher Education Liz Thomas, Jocey Quinn, 2006-12-16 This book does not focus simply on the employment prospects of first generation higher education entrants but rather engages with the wider possibilities of social engagement and transformation that can arise from participation in higher education It provides essential reading for administrators policy makers managers academics and indeed anyone else interested in how to widen the socio economic base of higher education so that the process is informed by a significant concern with social justice and reducing inequality Rosemary Deem Professor of Education University of Bristol This book examines the proposition that parental education is a key factor contributing to the access and success of students but that insufficient attention is paid to this by researchers national systems and institutional interventions Analysis of research findings from ten countries plus a UK wide study indicates that parental education is more important in determining access to higher education than parental employment or financial status The book provides a clear conceptualisation of first generation entry exploring its complex interrelationship with social class Furthermore it demonstrates that when first generation entry is used as a lens it disrupts the taken for granted assumptions regarding widening participation and helps produce much more effective approaches to targeting access and supporting student success First Generation Entry into Higher Education provides a unique and insightful examination of how first generation entrants are supported or otherwise by different national approaches and institutional responses The book is essential reading for all with an interest in widening participation in higher education

Contexts of Social Capital Ray-May Hsung, Nan Lin, Ronald L. Breiger, 2010-11-24 The concept of social capital refers to the ways in which people make use of their social networks in getting ahead Social capital isn't just about the connections in networks but fundamentally concerns the distribution of resources on the basis of exchanges This volume focuses on how social capital interacts with social institutions based on the premise that markets communities and families are the major contexts within which people meet and build up social networks and the foci to create social capital Featuring innovations in thinking about exchange mechanisms resource distribution institutional logics resource diversity and the degree of openness or closure of social networks these chapters present some of the most important advances in this essential field Paralleling these theoretical developments the chapters also improve practical methodological work on social capital research using new techniques and measurement methods for the uncovering of social logics Religion as Social Capital Corwin E. Smidt, 2003 While Robert Putnam's Bowling Alone 2000 highlighted the notion of volunteerism little attention has been paid to religion's role in generating social capital an ironic omission since religion constitutes the most common form of voluntary association in America today Featuring essays by prominent social scientists this is the first book length systematic examination of the relationship between religion and social capital and what effects religious social capital has on democratic life in the United States Undercurrent Journal: Vol. 9, Issue 1 (Spring/Summer 2012) [Color] Mérédyth Bowcott systematic analysis of social capital both within the African American community black social capital and outside it where social capital crosses racial lines Orr shows that while black social capital may have created solidarity against white domination in Baltimore it hampered African American leaders capacity to enlist the cooperation from white corporate elites and suburban residents needed for school reform Orr examines social capital at the neighborhood level in elite level interactions and in intergovernmental relations to argue that black social capital doesn t necessarily translate into the kind of intergroup coalition needed to bring about school reform He also includes an extensive historical survey of the black community showing how distrust engendered by past black experiences has hampered the formation of significant intergroup paradoxical aspects of black social capital in citywide school reform while offering critical perspectives on current debates
