

[REDACTED]

Hi.

I should start by saying that this is from [REDACTED] You can decide for yourself whether to read on or not.

So if you are reading on... Firstly, I am sorry that this is typed, I hope it doesn't feel really impersonal – this is very personal for me. I did try to free write it but I couldn't read my own writing so you'd have zero chance, and I don't want anything to be ambiguous or miscommunicated.

Ok, so maybe this is something you thought would happen one day, maybe not. Maybe you hoped, maybe not. I don't know anything about you, and that's kind of the point I guess. Where do I start?

Sorry Lauren, I mean I know that 'sorry' at this point is like a grain of sand in a desert sandstorm, drop of rain in a tsunami (and assorted other predictably cliched similes), to the point of being almost pointless, but I am sorry. Desperately so. Our lack of relationship has been a constant source of regret and pain for me and (to get right to the heart of the matter) I would like some kind of relationship with you. I don't know how that would look like. Obviously I don't expect you to welcome me into your life as your dad – I have rarely been that, and even when I was, in your formative years, I was awful at it. I offer no excuses. It is my failing and mine to bear. It is also mine to try and start to do something about, and take responsibility for, and that's why I'm writing you. I'm not trying to be anything, I'm not trying to deny anything, I'm not trying to cover up anything. I just want to get to know you. In any way at all.

I cannot make any assumptions about you, and nor will I try. You might detest the thought of me, or you might think about talking with me often, or somewhere in between, I wouldn't know. But I'm reaching out to you (horrible saccharin phrase I know – sorry again) in the hope that you would at least have some kind of contact with me, even if it just so I can offer an explanation as to why it has taken me so long to try. I will offer no excuses, no justifications, no self-pitying tales of 'it wasn't easy' or similar. I will listen and answer your questions candidly and honestly. I miss you in a way that is so unlike anything else I have ever experienced in my life. To miss someone you don't even know is the weirdest feeling, and whilst I've no intention of making this about me, I do want you to know that I think about you constantly and wish I knew you. It's important to me that you are aware of this. I know what I have not done to support your wonderful mum and family. How they always supported me in ways that my family did not support yours, and I am forever grateful for them all, and I wish I could make things better.

I could write pages and pages of apologies, describing how I have let you down, decrying myself and hoping that some kind of declaration of self-loathing might in some way make you forgive me, but I see no profit in that. I know how I feel about myself when it comes to you and it's a pretty bleak place to be. I would rather look in a different direction, something more hopeful, constructive, fruitful and personal. I can't change what's been and gone [REDACTED], but I can offer my hand.

If you have any interest in speaking with me then get in touch, even if it's just to tell me to leave you alone.

I love you [REDACTED] You probably can't understand that as a concept (I said I wouldn't make assumptions about you I know... but it's hard for me to believe anything other than this).

If you do want any kind of contact / explanation / conversation then let me know
