I'm Feeling Fine Darryl Nelson, 2008-07 Darryl Nelson was sent to Mogadishu Somalia after being stationed stateside with the Army's 101st airborne division as a maintenance platoon leader. He experienced strange dreams and nightmares and in 1993 after surviving attacks in Mogadishu he was diagnosed with kidney failure. The next year Nelson was forced to retire from active duty and was flown out of Somalia to receive medical care at the Walter Reed Army Medical Center. He had more encounters with dreams and nightmares. While receiving dialysis treatment he was diagnosed with cancer. His kidneys were surgically removed and unfortunately his twin brother was not a match for transplant surgery. Nelson was put on a transplant list but was told he would have to wait two years for the procedure. More than two years later he still waits for transplant surgery but he remains upbeat and hopeful. Friends and relatives have come to know what answer to expect when they ask Nelson how he's feeling. He'll tell you I'm feeling fine. Nelson provides inspiration for others living with kidney disease and helps raise the awareness of close friends and family on the loss of an organ.

Outsmarting Overeating Karen R. Koenig, 2015-01-05 Use Life Skills Not Willpower to Stop Overeating. The reason you turn to food when you're stressed or distressed is that you don't have better ways of managing life's ups and downs. According to Karen R. Koenig, an expert on the psychology of eating, you can transform your eating habits and your life by developing effective life skills. When you have enhanced skills you won't need to turn to mindless eating to make it through the day and will get the best out of life rather than letting life get the best of you. With Koenig's guidance you'll learn how to establish and maintain functional relationships, take care of yourself physically and emotionally, think rationally, and create a passionate, joyful, and meaningful life. When these behaviors take root and become automatic, food becomes what it is meant to be: nourishment and one of life's many pleasures.
