

the glass

the glass was half-empty he argued the glass was half-full she had said so they told him he was pessimistic that he should think like her instead but what they had failed to fathom and what they had struggled to see was the state of the glass in the first place was key to how it was perceived her glass has been empty to start with so, of course it was now filling up whilst his had been full to the brim, overflowing and spilling right over the cup so, yes it was now looking emptier and maybe his loss made him sad but they told him he couldn't bemoan it for he had more than some people had yet for her they did not use the notion that the way she felt should be ignored no, they didn't tell her that she couldn't be happy 'cos there would be someone with more yes, we should count all our blessings and try to look on the bright side but a loss is a loss, if we see it or not so it's easier just to be kind see they say don't judge books by their covers well, we shouldn't judge glasses by halves and we shouldn't judge people if we've no idea what they had in their glass at the start
