Politics and Government in Byzantium Jonathan Shea, 2020-05-14 The eleventh century marked a turning point in the history of the Byzantine Empire At its start Byzantium was the paramount power in the Mediterranean world by turns feared respected and admired By the century's close the empire had lost half of its territory and had managed only a partial recovery under the leadership of the Komnenos family How did a powerful and famously wealthy empire collapse so quickly The contemporary accounts of this turbulent long century taken here as c 950 1100 attribute the empire's decline to the emperors reckless and self serving favouring of civilian bureaucrats and while these sources are today widely acknowledged as biased and unreliable modern assessments of the century have hitherto failed to suggest any tangible alternatives To circumvent this dearth of archival material Jonathan Shea has meticulously analysed 2 200 unpublished seals from the period more than a third of the known total extant today to uncover exactly whom the emperors were favouring and promoting as well as developing a nuanced and revealing picture of the makeup of the much chastised civilian bureaucracy The sigillographic evidence is throughout measured against the written material to give a fresh account of this key transitional century and a rare insight into Byzantine politics
