Helicopter Test And Evaluation:

Helicopter Test and Evaluation Alastair Cooke, Eric Fitzpatrick, 2009-02-12 Although a number of texts on helicopter aerodynamics have been written few have explained how the various theories concerning rotorborne flight underpin practical flight test and evaluation This book combines theoretical information on aerodynamics stability control and performance with details of evaluation methodologies and practical guidance on the conduct of helicopter flight tests For each topic the relevant theory is explained briefly and followed by details of the practical aspects of testing a conventional helicopter These include safety considerations planning the tests the most efficient way to conduct individual flights Where possible typical test results are presented and discussed The book draws on the authors extensive experience in flight test and flight test training and will appeal not only to professionals working in the area of rotorcraft test and evaluation but also to helicopter pilots rotorcraft designers and manufacturers and final year undergraduates of aeronautical engineering Category III, System Operational Test and Evaluation of UH-1F [helicopter] ,1965 Test and Evaluation of the Army's CH-47 Helicopter Flight Simulator Juri Toomepuu, ARMY TRAINING SUPPORT CENTER FORT EUSTIS VA., 1977 This report gives an overview of the Army's current efforts to test and evaluate the prototype CH 47 Helicopter Flight Simulator CH47FS This effort includes a combined development and operational test DT OT II and a Cost and Training Effectiveness Analysis CTEA The CH47FS is the first prototype of the Army's new generation flight simulators with six degrees of freedom motion system which incorporate a video camera terrain board visual system The current evaluation represents a significant advance in the procedures and methods for validation of the Army's stated flight simulator requirements During the operational test transfer of training experiments will be conducted for both institutional and unit pilot training and objective and subjective training effectiveness data will be collected The CTEA using data generated by the test will evaluate the simulator cost and training effectiveness for various training packages defined in terms of the extent of substitution of aircraft by simulator in pilot training A Basis of Issue Plan BOIP model for flight simulators based on mathematical programming techniques will be developed and a proposed BOIP for the CH47FS prepared as part of the CTEA The report lists operational and technical issues for additional evaluation of flight simulators Author Enlisted Evaluation System MOS Proficiency Test Aid for Tandem Rotor Helicopter Mechanic (MOS Code 674) ,1958 Test and Evaluation of HRP Helicopter CG COAST GUARD WASHINGTON D C TESTING AND DEVELOPMENT DIV.,1949 Flight evaluation tests were conducted on a Coast Guard HRP 1 type helicopter to evaluate and determine the following performances service ceiling the endurance at three cruising speeds with most economical consumption at each power used and hovering ceiling Technical Information Indexes United States. Naval Air Systems Command,1975 VFR Helicopter Obstacle-Rich Environments: Test and Evaluation ,1994 This is the first in a series of two letter reports detailing the specific test and evaluation requirements scenarios data processing techniques and government industry comments concerning pilot performance in an obstacle rich environment The second report will develop and recommend the requirements for a piloted helicopter visual simulator to support data collection in this effort This report details the issues and the development of test and evaluation criteria necessary to evaluate the psychological effects of an increasingly obstacle rich VFR heliport environment on the ability of a pilot to operate In addition it addresses a conceptual application of target level of safety to assist the FAA and individuals concerned with heliport planning with regard to the proximity of obstacles to a VFR heliport The effect of an increasingly obstacle rich helicopter environment on pilot performance will be tested by collecting definitive performance data through the use of a piloted visual helicopter simulator Results will be verified with actual flight testing This study is divided into two phases Phase 1 is further divided into four tasks 1 test and evaluation requirements 2 simulation requirements and facilities 3 simulation test plan and 4 pilot briefing materials The product of task 3 is the completed test plan The product of task 4 is pilot briefing material that explains their role in the test and participation requirements

Norman A. Mattmuller, George M. Yamakawa, Daniel C. Dugan, Harry W. Chambers, ARMY AVIATION SYSTEMS TEST ACTIVITY EDWARDS AFB CALIF., 1969

The Army Preliminary Evaluation of the YCH 47B helicopter was conducted by the US Army Aviation Systems Test Activity at Philadelphia Pennsylvania in three phases during the period 1 March 1967 to 31 August 1967 The improvements in hover and level flight performance were defined and the change in flying qualities from those of the CH 47A helicopter were evaluated An objectionable level of noise and vibration was encountered during testing however a significant reduction in vibration was achieved by the reduction of recommended rotor rpm from 230 to 225 An expansion of the 16 000 pound external load flight envelope to that of the helicopter with internal loads was substantiated with the exception of bank angle limitations As a result of stress checks performed in turn maneuvers the bank angle envelope was reduced to avoid excessive fatigue damage on aft rotor head control components Author

Modeling and Simulation Support for the Operational Test and Evaluation of a Tactical Airborne Reconnaissance System Kevin J. Schmidt, 1999-12-01 Today s decreasing defense budget has forced the military to reduce its spending on operational testing of new equipment among many other areas Reduced testing has forced evaluators to focus their attention on possible sensitive issues prior to and during testing of new equipment The Simulation Test and Evaluation Process implemented in 1995 to help reduce testing costs has been an integral part of the test and evaluation process This thesis develops stochastic simulations to suggest the sensitive aspects of operating and maintaining a system of mobile reconnaissance platforms specifically a helicopter force more specifically the RAH 66 Comanche prior to and during actual testing The simulation can also be implemented to compare the effectiveness of different mobile reconnaissance platforms to augment the conduct of side by side field testing of actual platforms This simple stochastic event driven simulation may be used to conduct sensitivity analysis on system design and operational issues including attrition for mobile reconnaissance platforms in order to focus the attention of the testers and evaluators on influential parameters during testing It may also be used to inform force design decision makers

Operational Scenarios for the Initial Operational Test and Evaluation of the RAH-66 Helicopter Eric G. Helm, 2002-06-01 The United States Army is undergoing force structure and doctrinal changes to meet the evolving threats facing the nation To fulfill operational requirements brought about by these changes Army aviation is developing the RAH 66 Comanche As a precursor to the Comanche being fielded in operational units the aircraft must perform to standard during its Initial Operational Test and Evaluation IOTE The Army must fashion the IOTE to ensure the Comanche meets the requirements of the future force To do this test scenarios must focus on placing the aircraft in environments and situations in which it will be expected to operate Test scenarios must be kept technically and tactically sound to provide accurate and realistic information This thesis identifies scenarios which encapsulate future requirements brought about by the Army's migration to the Objective Force The scenarios have been developed to test and evaluate operational effectiveness measures of performance The scenarios reflect the early stages of FCS due to Comanche being the first system tested As doctrine and the systems that comprise FCS continue to evolve it is recommended to ensure the scenarios remain updated to reflect the most current information and equipment Recommendations also include methods to alleviate resource constraints

AGARD Flight Test Techniques Series. Volume 12. The Principles of Flight Test Assessment of Flight-Safety-Critical Systems in Helicopters (Les Principes de L'Evaluation, Dans Le Cadre Des Essais en Vol, Des Systemes Indispensables a la Securite de Vol Des Helicopteres). ,1994 Modern helicopters usually incorporate many engineering systems including pilot aiding systems such as autostabilisers and flight directors which are essential to the safe and effective use of the helicopter Where the helicopter can be endangered by failure of a system or of one of its units that system is termed flight safety critical In general the use of those systems should not incur a higher probability of hazard to the helicopter than that considered acceptable from considerations of structural or mechanical failure In assessing the suitability of a helicopter for its intended missions it has become increasingly important to consider the effects of the various systems provided In particular assessments of the implications of systems performance and failures derived from calculation and ground tests should be validated by flight tests This paper seeks to establish the general principles applicable to the testing in flight of any flight safety critical system with emphasis on certification rather than system development It does not deal with the testing of particular systems but it is hoped that readers will find the principles described readily applicable to specific cases
