Excel 365 FORMULAS X

When you store data in a workbook, you can create valuable summaries that use your raw data to reveal information. Before you examine the mechanics of creating formulas, here are some formula-related terms you will encounter throughout this guide:

- Formula: A statement that calculates a value in a worksheet cell.
- Function: A built-in calculation that combines values in a specific way, such as by finding the sum of all values in a cell range.

- Argument: A value used in a formula (after the input).
- Operand: The result of a formula.
- Operator: A symbol denoting the set of a formula generating a result, or output.
EX: The formula =2+2 returns an output of 4.
- Operator: The structure of a function, specifying the number and order of arguments (input) it requires to return a result.

Order of Operations

Excel follows MS follows mathematical conventions when determining the order of operations used in a calculation. That order is as follows:

1. Parentheses: ()
2. Negatives, such as -7
3. Percentages: %
4. Exponentiation: ^, e.g., 2^3 is written as 2^3
5. Multiplication and division: * and /
6. Addition and subtraction: + and -

EX: 4 + 3 * 7 = 25, where 3 * 7 = 21, and 4 + 21 = 25.

If two operations on the same level, such as multiplication and division, occur outside parentheses, Excel performs them in left-to-right order.

EX: 8 * 3 / 6 = 4. You can change the order of operations by using parentheses.

EX: (4 + 3) * 7 = 49, where 4 + 3 = 7, and 7 * 7 = 49.

Creating Formulas

Create a formula:

Type an equal sign (=) followed by the values, cell references, or functions to be used in the calculation.

NOTE: The first character in a cell containing a formula must be =. If it is any other character, including a space, Excel interprets the cell's contents as text.

Refer to cells & cell ranges in formulas:

- Worksheet cells are identified by their column letter and their row number.
- The top-left cell in a worksheet is in column A and row 1, so its cell address is A1.
- You can also refer to cell ranges, or collections of cells.
- To identify a cell range, type the address of the cell at the top-left corner of the range, followed by a colon, and then the cell at the bottom-right corner of the range.
EX: The reference for cells 6 through 10 in column A and B would be A6:B10.
- To create a reference to multiple, noncontiguous groups of cells, put a comma between the references.
EX: Finding the sum of the values in the cell range J7:J2 and the range F7:G2 would call for the formula =SUM(J7:J2, F7:G2).

Create relative, absolute & mixed references:

- When you type a cell reference with just the column letter and row number, such as J7, that reference can change when you copy its formula to another cell.
- Copying the formula =J7 + J7 and pasting it one cell to the right would create the formula =J8 + J8. The destination cell is one column to the right of the original cell, so Excel changes the formula's references based on that difference.
- To create an absolute reference, one that doesn't change when you copy a formula, type a dollar sign ($) before the column and row designations.

EX: The formula =SUM * SUM won't change regardless of the cell you paste it into.

You can also create a mixed reference, where either rows or columns are absolute, by adding $ before just the element you want to remain the same.

EX: The cell reference $B7 allows changing columns and B7 allows changing rows.

Insert a function:

- Start creating the formula where you want to insert the function, and then do one of the following:
 - Type the first letters of the function name, and either finish typing its name, or click the function on the AutoComplete list that appears and press Enter.
 - Click the Insert Function  button and select the function you want to add.
 - Go to the Function Library group on the Formulas tab, click the category of the function you want to add, and then click the function name.

Get help using function argument Tooltips:

- Start creating a formula, and enter the name of the function followed by a left parenthesis, such as =SUM(
- In the function tooltip that appears below the cell that contains the formula, position the mouse pointer over the function name.
- When the function name's text changes to a blue, underlined format, click it to display the relevant help file.

Add an AutoSum function:

- Select a cell before a column of numbers.
- Go to the Editing group on the Home tab.
- Click the Autosum  button to add a SUM formula, or click the Autosum button's down arrow to select another function.
- To add an AutoSum formula that uses the SUM function, select the cell and press Alt + **=.

Create a link to a cell or cell range not on the current worksheet:

- If necessary, open the workbook that contains the outside data you want to use in your formula.
- Start creating the formula where you want to use data in cells in another worksheet or workbook.
- Display the external workbook, and then select the cells that contain the data to include in the formula.
- Finish creating the formula, and press Enter.
- NOTE: Excel follows workbook names with an evaluation point (e.g., CashFlow(Sheet4) and includes workbook names in square brackets (e.g., =SUM(WorkBook\CashFlow!B2:D4)). If the workbook or worksheet name contains a space, Excel puts single quotes around the workbook and worksheet references (e.g., 'Cash Flow'!B2:D4).

FORMULA

Using Tables In Formulas

Tables give formal structure to lists of data in a worksheet, with unique names for the table as a whole and for each column.

EX: A table named Sales1 (the default name for the first table you create in a workbook) could have columns named Year, StoreNumber, and Sales.

You could summarize the table's data using formulas, PivotTables, or charts. When you create tables, Excel automatically updates your formulas, PivotTables, or charts when you add a row of data. If you add data to a worksheet outside a table, you must edit the summary's settings to reflect the new values.

Create a table:

- Click any cell in a data list.
- Go to the Tables group on the Insert tab.
- Click Format as Table .
- In the gallery that appears, click the style you want to apply.
- In the Format as Table dialog box, verify that Excel has identified the correct cell range, check the My table has headers box if appropriate, and click OK.

Refer to a table column in a formula:

- Start creating a formula in a cell, such as =AVERAGE(
- In the parentheses, type the name of the table or start typing it and select it from the suggestions list.
- Type a left square bracket ([), click the name of the column you want to summarize, and then type a right square bracket (]). =AVERAGE(Sales1[Sales]).
- Finish editing your formula and press Enter.
