

Practitioner's Guide to Ethical Decision Making

Holly Forester-Miller, Ph.D. and Thomas E. Davis, Ph.D.

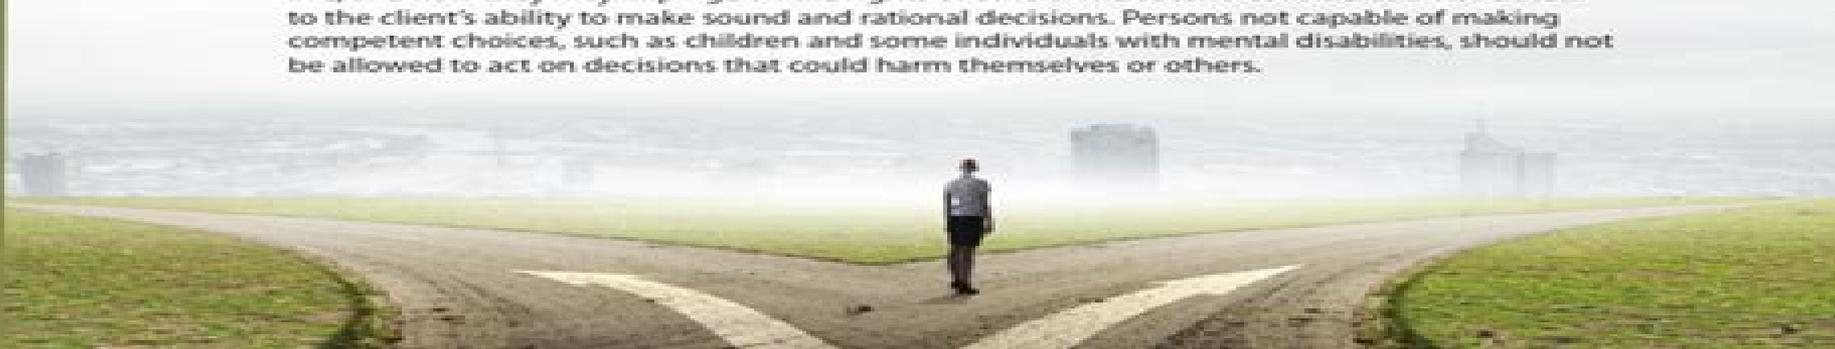

Introduction

Counselors are often faced with situations that require sound ethical decision-making ability. Determining the appropriate course to take when faced with a difficult ethical dilemma can be a challenge. To assist American Counseling Association (ACA) members in meeting this challenge, the authors have developed the Practitioner's Guide to Ethical Decision Making as a framework for sound ethical decision making. This document addresses the guiding principles that are globally valuable in ethical decision making and presents a model that professionals can use as they address ethical questions and dilemmas in their work.

Foundational Principles

Several foundational principles are the underpinnings of best ethical practice and are viewed as central to the process of ethical decision making within the helping professions (Beauchamp & Childress, 2012; Coughlin, 2008; Kitchener, 1984; Kitchener & Anderson, 2011). Beauchamp and Childress (1979) identified four principles that are at the core of ethical reasoning in health care: autonomy, justice, beneficence, and nonmaleficence. Kitchener (1984) added a fifth principle—fidelity. She viewed these five principles as the cornerstone of ethical guidelines for counselors. Ethical guidelines cannot address all situations that a counselor is forced to confront. Reviewing these ethical principles, which serve as the foundation of the guidelines, often helps to clarify the issues involved in a given situation. The five bedrock principles of autonomy, justice, beneficence, nonmaleficence, and fidelity are each vital in and of themselves to a healthy counseling relationship. By exploring an ethical dilemma with regard to these principles, a counselor may come to a better understanding of the conflicting issues. A description of each of the five foundational principles follows.

Autonomy is the principle that addresses respect for independence, and self-determination. The essence of this principle is allowing an individual the freedom of choice and action. It addresses the responsibility of the counselor to encourage clients, when appropriate, to make their own decisions and to act on their own values. There are two important considerations in encouraging clients to be autonomous. First, helping clients to understand how their decisions and their values may be received within the context of the society in which they live, and how they may impinge on the rights of others. The second consideration is related to the client's ability to make sound and rational decisions. Persons not capable of making competent choices, such as children and some individuals with mental disabilities, should not be allowed to act on decisions that could harm themselves or others.
