Starmer is new PM as Tories left with one North East seat in election hammering

GRAEME WHITFIELD
Journal Editor

Sir Keir Starmer took over as Prime Minister yesterday after a resounding election victory that saw the Conservatives secure its all but one North East seat.

Northumberland MP Ann-Marie Trevelyan and Gail Dwyer - both members of the previous Conservative government - lost their seats.

But Sir Keir's victory was not universal. Labour won 482 seats, a majority of over 170. The Conservatives had managed just 123. The Lib Dem lost their seat from just 11 in the last election to 73 this time. Reform UK piled up four million votes - more than the Liberal Democrats - but only managed five seats, including party leader Nigel Farage in Clackmannanshire.

With one constituency left to contest, Labour won an MEP seat, a majority of over 170. The Conservatives had managed just 123. The Lib Dem lost their seat from just 11 in the last election to 73 this time. Reform UK piled up four million votes - more than the Liberal Democrats - but only managed five seats, including party leader Nigel Farage in Clackmannanshire. The Conservatives won four seats, while the SNP changed from 20 last time to just 10.

North East seats to be retained by the Conservatives.
