A woman with her hands raised, looking up at a bright, colorful explosion of light against a dark background. The light is a mix of yellow, orange, red, and blue, radiating from a central point. The woman's face is lit up, and her eyes are closed in a state of awe or joy. Her hair is dark and pulled back. The background is dark and textured, suggesting a night sky or a cave. The overall mood is one of wonder and spiritual connection.

Medieval Holy Women and the Desire for Death investigates the tension between death as necessary for bringing about union with God and as the end of life on earth For medieval Christians only death could offer complete union with God For medieval women in particular death was figured as a desirable end to their embodied lives at least this is the story told by the clergymen who typically wrote their biographies Medieval Holy Women and the Desire for Death questions this assumption and studies visionary narratives treatises and spiritual reflections by and about medieval Christian women from the thirteenth through the fifteenth centuries to reveal how these women understood their own deaths and how their depictions conformed to or departed from the stories told about them Rather than focusing on externalities like rituals revenants or miracles Jessica Barr instead tackles the desire for death from the inside seeking to elucidate the ways in which medieval people anticipated or experienced biological death on a personal level In narrating their spiritual lives within the framework of deeply held Christian beliefs these medieval women mystics illustrate how theology and experience converge and not infrequently diverge The London Quarterly Review ,1909 Experientia, Volume 1 Frances Flannery,Colleen Shantz,Rodney Alan Werline,2008 Magic and Mystery Alfred Thompson,1894 Earthographies Wendy Wheeler,Hugh Dunkerley,2008 London Quarterly Review ,1909 Nature's Religion Robert S. Corrington,1997-10-16

In the wake of both the semiotic and the psychoanalytic revolutions how is it possible to describe the object of religious worship in realist terms Semioticians argue that each object is known only insofar as it gives birth to a series of signs and interpretants new signs From the psychoanalytic side religious beliefs are seen to belong to transference energies and projections that contaminate the religious object with all too human complexes In Nature s Religion distinguished theologian and philosopher Robert S Corrington weaves together the concept of infinite semiosis with that of the transference to show that the self does have access to something in nature that is intrinsically religious Corrington argues that signs and our various transference fields can and do connect us with fully natural religious powers that are not of our own making thereby opening up a path past the Western monotheisms to a capacious religion of nature With a foreword by Robert C Neville Nature s Religion is essential reading for philosophers of religion scholars of the psychology of religion and theologians Textbook of

Father and Son Gavin Keulks, 2003 An innovative study of two of England's most popular controversial and influential writers. Father and Son breaks new ground in examining the relationship between Kingsley Amis and his son Martin Amis. Through intertextual readings of their essays and novels, Gavin Keulks examines how the Amises work negotiated the boundaries of their personal relationship while claiming territory in the literary debate between mimesis and modernist aesthetics. There was a battle over the nature of reality itself, a twentieth-century realism war conducted by loving family members and rival antithetical writers. Keulks argues that the Amises' relationship functioned as a source of literary inspiration and that their work illuminates many of the structural and stylistic shifts that have characterized the British novel since 1950.
