

Life in a medieval castle

The castles, strategically located, were the fortified mansions of the kings and feudal gentlemen. Starting from the 10th century, the lack of comforts and the progress of the offensive armament forced them to reform their interior and improve their defense systems.

Throne room, hall and banquet

Series of rooms for family and the highest nobility occupied their days given to the pleasure. The gentlemen occupied before their sleep in their towers, and the great hall, dining, other entertainment and formal banquets with several tables arranged in a U-shape for the ceremonial banquet of nobles.

Stable The stables were placed in the castle during the early days. The horses were kept in the stables.

The kitchen The kitchen was placed in the castle for the preparation of food for the nobles.

Stables under the castle The stables were placed under the castle for the horses.

Workshop The workshop was placed in the castle for the work of the nobles.

Room of the noble The room of the noble was placed in the castle for the nobles.
