Ethnic Question:

The Ethnic Question Rodolfo Stavenhagen, 1990 Race and Ethnic Data Collection on Social Security Number Applications William J. Nelson (Jr.), 1981 Challenges of Measuring an Ethnic World, 1993 Muslim Women and Power Danièle Joly, Khursheed Wadia, 2017-04-06 Winner of the W J M Mackenzie Book Prize 2017 This book provides an account of Muslim women's political and civic engagement in Britain and France. It examines their interaction with civil society and state institutions to provide an understanding of their development as political actors. The authors argue that Muslim women's participation is expressed at the intersections of the groups and society to which they belong. In Britain and France their political attitudes and behaviour are influenced by their national ethnic origins, religion and specific features of British and French societies. Thus three main spheres of action are identified: the ethnic group, religious group and majority society. Unequal gendered power relations characterise the interconnections between these spheres of action. Muslim women are positioned within these complex relations and find obstacles and/or facilitators governing their capacity to act politically. The authors suggest that Muslim women's interest in politics, knowledge of it and participation in both institutional and informal politics is higher than expected. This book will appeal to students and scholars of politics, sociology, gender studies and social anthropology and will also be of use to policy makers and practitioners in the field of gender and ethno-religious/ethno-cultural policy.

Radical Politics and Governance in India's North East Harihar Bhattacharyya, 2018-03-09 Tripura in India's Northeast remains the only region in the world which has sustained a strong left radical political tradition for more than a century in a context not usually congenial for left politics. Tripura is one of the 29 States in India which has returned the Communist Party of India Marxist led Left Front repeatedly to power. By contrast radical ethnic politics dot the political scenario in the rest of the region. This book examines the roots, nature, governmental performance and theoretical and policy implications of left radicalism in Tripura. The case of Tripura is placed in comparison with her neighbours in the region and in some cases with India's advanced States in governance matters. Based on original archival and the very recent empirical and documentary sources on the subject, the author shows that the Left in Tripura is well entrenched and that it has sustained itself compared to other parts of India despite deeply rooted ethnic tensions between the aboriginal peoples, tribes and immigrant Bengalis. The book explains how the Left sustains itself in the social and economic contexts of persistent ethnic conflicts which are rarely if ever punctuated by incipient class conflicts in a predominantly rural society in Tripura. It argues that shorn of the Indian Marxism's theoretical shibboleths, the Left in Tripura, which is part of the Indian Left, has learned to accommodate non-class tribal ethnicity within their own discourse and practices of government. This study demolishes the so-called durable disorder hypothesis in the existing knowledge on India's Northeast. A useful contribution to the study of radical left politics in India in general and state politics in particular, this book will be of interest to researchers of modern Indian history, India's Northeast and South Asian Politics.

Construction of Chinese Nationalism in the Early 21st Century Suisheng Zhao, 2014-07-25 Chinese nationalism is powered by a narrative of China's century of shame and humiliation in the hands of imperialist powers and calls for the Chinese government to redeem the past humiliations and take back all lost territories. The continuing surge of Chinese nationalism in the early 21st century therefore has fed a roiling sense of anxiety in many political capitals about whether a virulent nationalism has emerged to make China's rise anything but peaceful. This book addresses this anxiety by examining the domestic sources and foreign policy implications of Chinese nationalism in the early 21st century. It is divided into three parts. Part I is an overview of the scholarly debate about if the rise of Chinese nationalism has driven China's foreign policy in a more irrational and inflexible direction in the first one and half decades of the 21st century. Part II analyzes the construction of Chinese nationalism by a variety of domestic forces including the communist state, the angry youth, fen qing, liberal intellectuals, and ethnic groups. Part III explores whether Chinese nationalism is affirmative, assertive, or aggressive through the case studies of China's maritime territorial disputes with Japan in the East China Sea and with several Southeast Asian countries in the South China Sea, the border controversy over the ancient Koguryo with Korea, and the cross-Taiwan Strait relations. This book was based on articles published in the Journal of Contemporary China. Research and Statistics Note, 1980 Ethnicity in the 1991 Census, 1996 Polish Round Table, 1980 Ethnicity in the United States Andrew M. Greeley, 1974 Ethiopian Review, 1992-08 The Fortnightly Review, 1905 Greek Hero Cults and Ideas of Immortality Lewis Richard Farnell, 1921 Moody's Magazine Byron W. Holt, Augustus B. Kellogg, 1908 Moody's Magazine, 1908 Historical and Biographical Record of Southern California James Miller Guinn, 1902 The Higher Aspects of Greek Religion Lewis Richard Farnell, 1912 The American Magazine of Civics Andrew J. Palm, Henry Randall Waite, 1895 The Fortnightly, 1905 Native Voices Richard A. Grounds, George E. Tinker, David Eugene Wilkins, 2003 Native peoples of North America still face an uncertain future due to their unstable political, legal, and economic positions. Views of their predicament continue to be dominated by non-Indian writers. In response, a dozen Native American writers here reclaim their rightful role as influential voices in debates about Native communities. These scholars examine crucial issues of politics, law, and religion in the context of ongoing Native American resistance to the dominant culture. They particularly show how the writings of Vine Deloria Jr. have shaped and challenged American Indian scholarship in these areas since the 1960s. They provide key insights into Deloria's thought while introducing some critical issues confronting Native nations. Collectively, these essays take up four important themes: indigenous societies as the embodiment of cultures of resistance; legal resistance to western oppression against indigenous nations; contemporary Native religious practices; and Native intellectual challenges to academia. Essays address indigenous perspectives on topics usually treated by non-Indians, such as the role of women in Indian society, the importance of sacred sites to American Indian religious identity, and the relationship of native language to indigenous autonomy. A closing essay by Deloria in vintage form reminds Native Americans of their responsibilities and obligations to one another.

and to past and future generations This book argues for renewed cultivation of a Native American Studies that is more Indian centered
