Blum, 2017-03-03 This title includes a number of Open Access chapters Urban horticulture referring to the study and cultivation of the relationship between plants and the urban environment is gaining more attention as the world rapidly urbanizes and cities expand While plants have been grown in urban areas for millennia it is now recognized that they not only provide food ornament and recreation but also supply invaluable ecological services that help mitigate potentially negative impacts of urban ecosystems and thus increase the livability of cities This book provides background on key issues in this growing field Environmental Education and Advocacy Edward A. Johnson, Michael J. Mappin, 2005-03-03 Environmental education has often blurred the distinction between ecological science and environmental advocacy Growing public awareness of environmental problems and desire for action may be contributing to this blurring There is a need to clarify the distinction between the role of ecological science and the role of social and political values for the environment within environmental education This book addresses this need by examining the changing perspectives of ecology in education and the changing perspectives of education in environmental education Guidelines are provided for assessing the science and education perspectives within environmental education along with suggested frameworks for development of programs and resources that integrate current science education and action This book will be of interest to environmental educators ecologists interested in environmental education and curriculum and resource developers

Marcotullio,Robert I. McDonald,Susan Parnell,Maria Schewenius,Marte Sendstad,Karen C. Seto,Cathy Wilkinson,2013-09-21 Urbanization is a global phenomenon and the book emphasizes that this is not just a social technological process It is also a social ecological process where cities are places for nature and where cities also are dependent on and have impacts on the biosphere at different scales from local to global The book is a global assessment and delivers four main conclusions Urban areas are expanding faster than urban populations Half the increase in urban land across the world over the next 20 years will occur in Asia with the most extensive change expected to take place in India and China Urban areas modify their local and regional climate through the urban heat island effect and by altering precipitation patterns which together will have significant impacts on net primary production ecosystem health and biodiversity Urban expansion will heavily draw on natural resources including water on a global scale and will often consume prime agricultural land with knock on effects on biodiversity and ecosystem services elsewhere

Future urban expansion will often occur in areas where the capacity for formal governance is restricted which will constrain the protection of biodiversity and management of ecosystem services
