

Personal Statement For Graduate School Special Education

From a young age, I have been passionate about education and helping others, particularly those who face unique challenges. This passion, combined with my academic and professional experiences, has guided me towards a career in special education. As I seek to further my education and enhance my skills, I am excited to pursue graduate studies in special education at the University of Washington.

My journey began with a Bachelor's degree in Elementary Education from the University of California, Berkeley. During my undergraduate studies, I took courses in child development, educational psychology, and inclusive teaching practices, which provided me with a solid foundation in understanding diverse learning needs. One of the most impactful experiences was my participation in a service-learning project where I worked with children with autism. This experience deepened my commitment to special education and inspired me to pursue it as a career.

In addition to my academic background, I have gained practical experience working in various educational settings. As a teaching assistant at Berkeley Elementary School, I supported students with learning disabilities and behavioral challenges. This role allowed me to develop essential skills in differentiated instruction, behavior management, and individualized education plans (IEPs). One of the most rewarding aspects of this role was seeing students' progress and confidence grow as they overcame their challenges.

My internship at the San Francisco Special Education Center further solidified my passion for this field. Working alongside experienced special educators, I gained hands-on experience in designing and implementing interventions for students with a range of disabilities, including intellectual disabilities, ADHD, and sensory impairments. One memorable experience was developing a communication board for a non-verbal
