Foundations of Generic Optimization M. Iglesias,B. Naudts,A. Verschoren,C. Vidal,2006-03-30 The success of a genetic algorithm when applied to an optimization problem depends upon several features present or absent in the problem to be solved including the quality of the encoding of data the geometric structure of the search space deception or epistasis This book deals essentially with the latter notion presenting for the first time a complete state of the art of research on this notion in a structured completely self contained and methodical way In particular it contains a refresher on the linear algebra used in the text as well as an elementary introductory chapter on genetic algorithms aimed at readers unacquainted with this notion In this way the monograph aims to serve a broad audience consisting of graduate and advanced undergraduate students in mathematics and computer science as well as researchers working in the domains of optimization artificial intelligence theoretical computer science combinatorics and evolutionary algorithms
