

How dyslexia can affect spelling

Dyslexia makes it hard to isolate the sounds in words, match those sounds to letters and blend sounds into words.

Learning to spell may be even harder than learning to read for some kids with dyslexia.

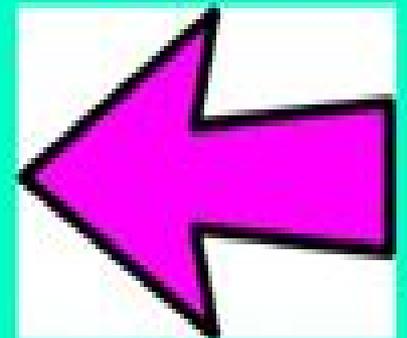

Kids with dyslexia frequently confuse letters that sound alike.

Vowels can be very tricky and may even get left out .

Kids may mix up the order of letters and misspell common sight words even after lots of practice.

Example: dnsr for dinosaur
