Freak Weather:

Extreme Weather, Health, and Communities Sheila Lakshmi Steinberg, William A. Sprigg, 2016-04-20 This volume presents a unique interdisciplinary approach drawing on expertise in both the natural and social sciences A primary goal is to present a scientific and socially integrated perspective on place based community engagement extreme weather and health Each year extreme weather is leading to natural disasters around the world and exerting huge social and health costs The International Monetary Fund 2012 estimates that since 2010 700 worldwide natural disasters have affected more than 450 million people around the globe The best coping strategy for extreme weather and environmental change is a strong offense Communities armed with a spatial understanding of their resources risks strengths weaknesses community capabilities and social networks will have the best chance of reducing losses and achieving a better outcome when extreme weather and disaster strikes

Extreme Weather and Global Media Julia Leyda, Diane Negra, 2015-06-05 In the two decades bracketing the turn of the millennium large scale weather disasters have been inevitably constructed as media events As such they challenge the meaning of concepts such as identity and citizenship for both locally affected populations and widespread spectator communities This timely collection pinpoints the features of an often overlooked yet rapidly expanding category of global media and analyzes both its forms and functions Specifically contributors argue that the intense promotion and consumption of extreme weather events takes up the slack for the public conversations society is not having about the environment and the feeling of powerlessness that accompanies the realization that anthropogenic climate change has now reached a point of no return Incorporating a range of case studies of extreme weather mediation in India the UK Germany Sweden the US and Japan and exploring recent and ongoing disasters such as Superstorm Sandy the Fukushima nuclear crisis flooding in Germany and heat waves in the UK Extreme Weather and Global Media generates valuable inquiry into the representational and social characteristics of the new culture of extreme weather

Extreme Weather Events and Public Health Responses Wilhelm Kirch, B. Menne, R. Bertollini, 2006-01-16 The global climate is changing The trend towards warmer average surface temperatures for the period since 1976 is roughly three times that of the past 100 years as a whole In recent years warming seems to be attributable to human activities man made environmental changes like land use changes deforestation urbanisation and the reduction of wetlands Global climate change is likely to be accompanied by an increase in frequency and intensity of extreme weather events This brings with it increased health risks and hence a demand for an adequate response from local health authorities to meet these risks In 2004 the WHO Regional Office for Europe and the European Environment Agency organized an expert meeting to exchange information and develop recommendations on public health and environmental responses to weather and climate extremes floods heat waves and cold spells This book reflects a collection of case studies and experiences of experts ministries and international organizations
