Dominion of the Eye Marvin Trachtenberg, 1997 Dominion of the Eye Urbanism Art and Power in Early Modern Florence radically revises our ideas about the origins of rationally planned public space in the European city Through a spatial and historical analysis of the major squares of Florence all built in the Trecento together with primary civic monuments Marvin Trachtenberg shows that contrary to current belief Florentine planners engaged in a theoretically sophisticated mode of practice In these squares geometrically structured perspectival views of the principal monuments were established long before Alberti and other Renaissance theorists may have promoted such planning Trachtenberg demonstrates that this urbanistic scenography deeply informed by medieval optical science was closely allied with perspectival developments in architecture painting and sculpture forming a unified visual culture that was highly attentive to the eye of the spectator An analysis of the critical role of the piazza in the Florentine sociopolitical field reveals how the art of the piazza was part of state practice as a work of art Including more than 50 new drawings and 200 illustrations Dominion of the Eye challenges many of the cardinal truisms in the art history of the Renaissance offering a new model for understanding the art of Italy in the early modern era
