

Electricity comes to cocoa bottom

Then all the children of Cocoa Bottom went to see Mr. Samuel's electric lights.
They camped on the grass bank outside his house,
their lamps filled with oil,
for sunset,
watching the sky turn yellow, orange,
Grannie Patterson across the road
peeped through the crack in her porch door.
The cable was drawn like a pencil line across the sun.
The fireflies waited in the shadows,
their lanterns off,
The King-Kings* swooped in from the hills,
congregating in the orange trees.
A breeze coming home from sea held its breath;

bamboo lining the dirt road stopped its swaying,
and evening came as soft as chiffon curtains:
Closing. Closing.
Light!
Mr. Samuel smiling on the verandah –
a silhouette against the yellow shimmer behind him –
and there arising such a gasp,
such a fluttering of wings,
tweet-a-whit,
such a swaying, swaying,
Light! Marvellous light!
And then the breeze rose up from above the trees,
swelling and swelling into a wind

such that the long grass bent forward
stretching across the bank like so many bowed heads.
And a voice in the wind whispered:
Is there one among us to record this moment!
But there was none –
no one (except for a few warm rocks hidden among mongoose ferns) even heard a sound.
Already the children of Cocoa Bottom
had lit their lamps for the dark journey home,
and it was too late –
the moment had passed

The Art of Friction Charles Blackstone, Jill Talbot, 2009-06-03 We live in an Enquirer reality television addled world, a world in which most college students receive their news from the Daily Show and discourse via text message, assert Charles Blackstone and Jill Talbot. Recently two nonfiction writers have been criticized for falsifying memoirs. Oprah excoriated James Frey on her show. Nasdiij was impugned by Sherman Alexie in Time. Is our next trend in literature to lock down such boundaries among the literati? Or should we address the fictionalizing of nonfiction, the truth of fiction? The Art of Friction surveys the borderlands where fiction and nonfiction intermingle and challenge genre lines. It anthologizes nineteen creative works by contemporary award-winning writers including Junot Díaz, Jonathan Safran Foer, Thomas Beller, Bernard Cooper, Wendy McClure, and Terry Tempest Williams, who also provide companion pieces in which they comment on their work. These selections, which place short stories and personal essays and hybrids of the two side by side, allow readers to examine the similarities and differences between the genres as well as explore the trends in genre overlap. Functioning as both a reader and a discussion of the craft of writing, The Art of Friction is a timely essential book for all writers and readers who seek the truthfulness of lived experience through nonfiction.

Sisters of Caliban M. J. Fenwick, 1996 Representing the best of contemporary voices, this multilingual anthology speaks of a unified aspiration to defy the colonial and paternalistic tradition and create strong new models which positively promote the black women's perspective.

Notes from a Writer's Book of Cures and Spells Marcia Douglas, 2005 Writing is a cover for necromancy. Carmen Innocencia accuses her creator Flamingo Tongue, a young Jamaican writer. Carmen is not the only one of Flamingo's creations to confront her author for her characters and their tragic, heartening story come vividly alive, perhaps too alive, and just to make sure she can control them. Flamingo makes doll figures of them, but even then there is Alva Donovan, blinded in childhood with one seeing eye, one dreaming eye, with whom Flamingo exchanges shoes and in whom she begins to fear she will lose herself. There are the other members of the Donovan family: Dahlia Paul, aka Made in China, and their parents, Mama Milly and Daddy Clive, the beekeeper whose sudden violent deaths set up the patterns of separation and eventual reconnection and healing that run through the novel. As Carmen's accusation suggests, this is a novel set at the crossroads between the living and the dead and the cemetery, literally, becomes the refuge of the orphaned children between the harsh realities of the violence which spills over from an election campaign and a world where dreams, spirit possession, and women who become snails are just as real.
