

Activity: An Introduction

Students demonstrate an understanding of compound probability through simple events based on the probability of the first event occurring by applying the principle of independence. The use of combinations and permutations describe more than one event occurring simultaneously, sequentially or together. The typical permutation problem involves finding the number of ways to arrange the elements that describe a single event, whereas finding the number of ways to arrange objects in a sequence that involves identifying or order given length, and a combination problem involves finding the number of ways to choose a group of objects from a group of objects without regard to the order in which they are chosen. Students are able to apply the multiplication principle to find the number of ways to choose objects from a group of objects without regard to the order in which they are chosen.

Students identify the elements of a sample space and determine the number of outcomes for a given experiment through the following sample space:

Sample space:  $\{a, b, c, d, e, f, g, h, i, j, k, l, m, n, o, p, q, r, s, t, u, v, w, x, y, z\}$

1. How many outcomes are there? 26 (number of letters in alphabet)

2. How many outcomes are there? 26 (number of letters in alphabet)

3. How many outcomes are there? 26 (number of letters in alphabet)

4. How many outcomes are there? 26 (number of letters in alphabet)
