

AIDS as a Globalizing Panic

John O'Neill

In the present context of HIV/AIDS knowledge, marked as it is by the absence of a vaccine discovery, it falls to the social and health sciences broadly conceived to devise institutional responses to AIDS that will contain both the illness and our social responses to it. Here, of course, 'containment' is sought on two levels and it may be that a considerable fiction is involved in hoping that the HIV virus is, so to speak, virus sociologicus. While it is doubtful that the virus can learn sociology, it is certainly true that sociology cannot remain ideologically ignorant of virology. But this in turn means that the social sciences in general are obliged to rethink themselves before they can be adapted ready-made to the new limitations which HIV/AIDS imposes not only upon our sexual conduct but upon a range of professional behavior where contact with AIDS is involved. This is especially the case since the professionalization of the social sciences, like that of the medical sciences, has proceeded in terms of an ideological demarcation between factual knowledge and moral knowledge that, while honored by hardline scientists of either ilk, is in fact breached by developments in the bio-technological sciences that have reopened the frontier of ethico-legal enquiry. The social sciences no longer have any neutral ground in these matters, and this is particularly the case with those who suffer from AIDS since they oblige us to reconceive our social policies and our moral values regarding trust and community.

Although AIDS is a relatively recent phenomenon, and despite the complexity of the virological and epidemiological dimensions of the HIV virus, it may be said that we have acquired a considerable knowledge of it in the short span of little over five years research (Royal Society of Canada, 1988; Spurgeon, 1988; Fee and Fox, 1988; Altman, 1987; Daedalus, 1989; New England Journal of Public Policy, 1988; The Milbank Quarterly, 1986; Ornstein, 1989). Indeed, AIDS has moved quickly through a cycle
