

Introduction: The Expanding Past

Barry Schwartz

In 1980, Mary Douglas brought out the first English version of Collective Memory, a series of papers that Maurice Halbwachs' admirers had published in France thirty years earlier. Douglas's book on Halbwachs is intrinsically important, but it also stands as a marker—a convenient and easily remembered way to date the start of a great wave of collective memory research that is bound to swell beyond the turn of the twenty-first century. Qualitative Sociology brings to this development seven new studies. Each study extends, in its own way, a vital tradition of sociological inquiry.

I

The sociology of memory has an uneven history. Charles Horton Cooley (1918) and George Herbert Mead (1929, 1932) were the first Americans to explore the social context of memory, but their efforts never gelled into a coherent perspective. It was the French school of Emile Durkheim that made memory an object of systematic inquiry. Durkheim's own interest in the past as a "social fact" goes back to his and Marcel Mauss's (1903) treatment of ancient Chinese time reckoning (Primitive Classification [1903] 1963). In The Elementary Forms of the Religious Life ([1915] 1965), Durkheim's interest shifted from the social context of time classifications to commemoration rites as binders of present and past.

Stefan Czarnowski's The Cult of Heroes and Its Social Conditions (1919), an analysis of religious rituals and festivals devoted to Saint Patrick, was the first monograph to enlarge Durkheim's understanding of the social framework of commemoration. Czarnowski's efforts, however, were too specialized to be appreciated outside a small circle of religion scholars. The

The novel begins with Richard Papen, a bright but troubled young man, arriving at Hampden College. Richard is immediately drawn to the group of students who call themselves the Classics Club. The club is led by Henry Winter, a brilliant and charismatic young man. Henry is obsessed with Greek mythology and philosophy, and he quickly draws Richard into his world. The other members of the Classics Club are equally as fascinating. Bunny Corcoran is a wealthy and spoiled young man who is always looking for a good time. Charles Tavis is a quiet and reserved young man who is deeply in love with Henry. Camilla Macaulay is a beautiful and intelligent young woman who is drawn to the power and danger of the Classics Club. The students are all deeply in love with Morrow, and they are willing to do anything to please him. Morrow is a complex and mysterious figure, and he seems to be manipulating the students for his own purposes. As the students become more involved with Morrow, they begin to commit increasingly dangerous acts. The Secret History is a brilliant and suspenseful novel that will keep you wondering until the very end. The novel is a cautionary tale about the dangers of obsession and the power of evil.
