The Psychology of Joss Whedon Joy Davidson, Leah Wilson, 2007-11-10 First there was Buffy the Vampire Slayer then its spin off Angel then the cult hit Firefly and its follow up film Serenity They all had two things in common their creator Joss Whedon and their surprising psychological depth Revisit the worlds of Joss Whedon with trained psychologists at your side What are the psychological effects of constantly fighting for your life Why is neuroscience the Whedonverse s most terrifying villain How can watching Joss s shows help you take on your own psychological issues It s all the best parts of Psych 101 without Professor Walsh Robert Kurzban explains how Mal s morals are a form of evolutionary pornography and why we like to watch Thomas Flamson explores free will in the Whedonverse with prophecies sacred duties and the long arm of the Alliance does anyone actually have any Carole Poole demonstrates how Buffy and Spike s season six relationship could be considered metaphor for narcissistic personality disorder and concludes that Buffy may have been better off continuing it Bradley J Daniels looks at River s Alliance altered brain and the real effects of stripping the amygdala Mikhail Lyubansky shows why psychologically death really is Buffy s gift And editor Joy Davidson takes on Angel s mommy issues how the course of his whole extraordinary existence can be traced back to the woman who made him a vampire

Reading the Vampire Slayer Roz Kaveney, 2004 Essays and analysis of the television programs Buffy the vampire slayer and Angel Includes an episode guide to all seven seasons of Buffy and to the first four seasons of Angel as well a critical overview of those seasons principal themes and structures

Hustling and Other Hard Work Bettylou Valentine, 1978 This work is conceived of as an attempt to merge the least pretentious of social science writing style with a more popular story telling style and thus appeal to and inform a more varied audience than is usually reached by either method alone The first three sections dealing with the thesis of the work a review of social science literature and the methodology used by the anthropologists in the community are primarily addressed to social scientists and other technicians The description of the community and the sketches of community people will hopefully be of more interest to the lay reader

Ideally the conclusions drawn from all of the preceding materials will be of interest to all readers. Because this work was designed to be read by the people who were the subjects of study for five years, it seemed reasonable to develop the writing along with them. Five years of living in a low income urban Black area have provided some insights into the kinds of reading materials that are popular there, including daily newspapers, Ebony magazine, and other specifically Afro American publications. Items that I label "escape reading" such as detective stories, love stories, pornography, and materials that the readers themselves describe as directly relevant to Black people and/or ghetto life, such as the work of Icepick Slim and Claude Brown. Although the specific reading material in such an area is varied, it most often is chosen or pursued for its relevance to the lives of Black people. It is to this interest in themselves as Black people, their history, and their present circumstances that I hope to appeal here. First, I want to describe accurately and interestingly events that took place in the Black community where I lived and worked from 1968 through 1973. I hope that it will be possible for people from other areas across this country to see how similar these problems and these people's reactions are to their own lives. Finally, I want to help the reader to look beyond the description of events to an analysis of why these events occur and reoccur. The reader will quickly discern that the project from which this report evolved was not a project undertaken to determine whether or not Black people in the United States are oppressed. We had made this determination to our own satisfaction long before this study was begun. Our purpose was to live in an oppressed community in order to determine and understand the forces that contribute to continued inequality.
