CHAPTER SEVEN NOTES

Chapter 7: The Road to Revolution (1763-1776)

(I) The Unpopularity of the Revolution

- In 1763, the British government passed the Proclamation Line to settle the western land question.
- The western land question appeared but remained largely unimportant to the majority because neither side was directly affected.
 - Being across the Atlantic made it difficult to spread the news.
 - Settlers felt primarily and naturally responsible to their immediate neighbors without reference to the government, but the British were increasingly different from regular and independent.
 - Many loyalists felt that it was wrong to fight a war, and that they were on the wrong side of the Atlantic.

(II) The British and the American People

- At the 18 congressional elections, voters gave the British government the greatest show of support by electing 147 members of the House of Representatives.
- The British and the American people were not directly affected by the Revolution.
 - The British government was not directly affected by the Revolution.
