The question of what environmental statistics is about is particularly important when it comes to the formulation of relevant research and training whether in academia agencies or industries This volume aims to give a new perception on the subject with some examples that are of concern and interest today Environmental statistics is in a take off stage both for reasons of societal challenge and statistical opportunity and is demanding more and more from non traditional and innovative statistical approaches The chapters in this volume which are specially prepared by several outstanding professionals involved in statistics and the environment discuss the current state of the art in diverse areas of environmental statistics The volume provides new perspectives and problems for future research training policy and regulation It will be valuable to researchers teachers consultants and graduate students in statistics environmental statistics statistical ecology and quantitative environmental sciences in academia industries governmental agencies laboratories and libraries Quantitative Estimation and Prediction of Human Cancer Risks Suresh H. Moolgavkar, 1999 This volume assesses formal methods for the quantitative estimation and prediction of human cancer risks Quantitative estimates of cancer risk can be expressed in different ways In some cases estimates of risk under conditions prevailing in the original data are of primary interest in others predictions of risk under other conditions are required Estimates of risk may be based on empirical models that provide a reasonable description of the available data or on models developed on the basis of plausible assumptions about the mechanisms of carcinogenesis Throughout this volume established scientific principles of carcinogenesis are used to support methods proposed for the quantitative estimation and prediction of risk
