Formal and Informal Speech

The way we speak to others depends on many factors. You must consider:

Who you are speaking with and how well you know them.

Where the conversation is taking place - is it a formal setting or an informal setting?

Different cultures often have different terms or phrases that are used, depending on the context.

In conversations, we can phrase things in a direct, active way, or in an indirect, passive way.

Active, Informal Voice

When speaking actively, we often start with I. Our speech is personal and is used to voice our opinion or needs. This is often used when speaking informally with people we know well.

Example:	I kicked the football as hard as I could but it smacked the window.
	Starts with I, so the speaker is talking about themselves.
