What is epilepsy?

Epilepsy is a long-term condition that causes a person to have recurrent seizures. It is caused by abnormal electrical activity in the brain. The brain is made up of billions of nerve cells, called neurons, which are connected to each other. In people with epilepsy, these connections can become overactive, leading to seizures.

What is an epileptic seizure?

An epileptic seizure is a sudden, temporary disturbance of the normal electrical activity of the brain. It can cause a person to lose consciousness, experience convulsions, or have other symptoms. Seizures are caused by abnormal electrical activity in the brain.

There are many different types of seizures, and they can be caused by a variety of factors. Some common causes include head injury, stroke, brain infection, and genetic factors. In some cases, the cause of a seizure is unknown.

Generalized seizures

Generalized seizures involve abnormal electrical activity that spreads across the entire brain. They can cause a person to lose consciousness and experience convulsions. There are several types of generalized seizures, including tonic-clonic, absence, and atypical absence seizures.

Partial (local) seizures

Partial (local) seizures involve abnormal electrical activity that is confined to a specific area of the brain. They can cause a variety of symptoms, including sensory changes, motor symptoms, and changes in consciousness. There are several types of partial (local) seizures, including simple partial, complex partial, and secondary generalized seizures.

Diagnosing and treating epilepsy

Diagnosing epilepsy involves a thorough medical history, physical examination, and various tests. The most common test is an EEG, which measures the electrical activity of the brain. Other tests include MRI, CT scans, and PET scans. Treatment for epilepsy typically involves medication, but surgery and other options are available for some people.

Managing your epilepsy

Managing your epilepsy involves taking medication as prescribed, avoiding triggers, and staying healthy. It is important to work closely with your doctor to find the best treatment plan for you. Some common triggers include stress, lack of sleep, and alcohol consumption.
