Fighting With Whales:

Fighting the Whales R. M. Ballantyne, 2013-07-16 There are few things in this world that have filled me with so much astonishment as the fact that man can kill a whale That a fish more than sixty feet long and thirty feet round the body with the bulk of three hundred fat oxen rolled into one with the strength of many hundreds of horses able to swim at a rate that would carry it right round the world in twenty three days that can smash a boat to atoms with one slap of its tail and stave in the planks of a ship with one blow of its thick skull that such a monster can be caught and killed by man is most wonderful to hear of but I can tell from experience that it is much more wonderful to see There is a wise saying which I have often thought much upon It is this Knowledge is power Man is but a feeble creature and if he had to depend on his own bodily strength alone he could make no head against even the ordinary brutes in this world But the knowledge which has been given to him by his Maker has clothed man with great power so that he is more than a match for the fiercest beast in the forest or the largest fish in the sea Yet with all his knowledge with all his experience and all his power the killing of a great old sperm whale costs man a long tough battle sometimes it even costs him his life

Fighting the Whales Ballantyne, R. M., 2004 A shout of surprise broke from the men and no wonder for this was the largest fish I ever saw or heard of and he came up so clear of the water that we could see him from head to tail as he turned over in the air exposing his white belly to view and came down on his great side with a crash like thunder that might have been heard six miles off A splendid mass of pure white spray burst from the spot where he fell and in another moment he was gone R M Ballantyne 24 April 1825 8 February 1894 was a Scottish juvenile fiction writer Born Robert Michael Ballantyne in Edinburgh he was part of a famous family of printers and publishers At the age of 16 he went to Canada and was six years in the service of the Hudson s Bay Company He returned to Scotland in 1847 and published his first book the following year Hudson s Bay or Life in the Wilds of North America For some time he was employed by Messrs Constable the publishers but in 1856 he gave up business for the profession of literature and began the series of adventure stories for the young with which his name is popularly associated Illustrated Fighting the Whales, Or, Doings and Dangers on a Fishing Cruise Robert Michael Ballantyne,1882 Fighting the Whales R.
