

A fact sheet for aged care residents

Food and dining – your choices matter

Eating food that you like is important for your health and wellbeing.

The food and dining experience offered by your aged care provider should be safe, enjoyable, respectful and based on what you like.

If this is not your experience, it is okay for you to raise your concerns with the provider.

If you feel uncomfortable talking to your provider about your concerns, or if you have already tried without an acceptable outcome, contact the Aged Care Quality and Safety

How can the Commission help you?

When you contact the Commission about concerns you have with your food and dining experience at an aged care service, we will:

- listen to you to understand your concerns
- speak to your provider
- support you and your provider to know your rights and responsibilities
- make sure your provider understands their responsibilities
- help your provider to agree to a plan of action that meets
